From the Publisher . . .

Changes, changes . . . we are witnessing an era of constant changes, some for the better, and others, sometimes not so good.

But there are a few things that don't change. Kids still grow up dreaming about being policemen and firemen—a dream too often unfulfilled in adulthood and,

Scanner-Mate still continues to be the best, most accurate and updated information source for anyone who uses a scanner or monitor to witness first-hand the real thrills of those unfulfilled dreams.

Scanner Mate, '78. A publication we can really be proud of. We've got the latest FCC information, all checked and rechecked for accuracy by our employees and our computer, and besides all the Public Safety Channels for your area, plus the new Railroad frequencies we introduced last year, now we can give you Taxicab and Automobile Emergency channels too.

You will be amazed to find how many accidents, robberies or other life-threatening incidents are first reported to the authorities by taxicab drivers. The tow trucks and service stations that use the Auto Emergency channels can often give you more details of what's really going on during any incident involving a vehicle than the Police might ever dare say over the air.

Scanner Mate, '78 means getting the whole scoop on what's going on—from beginning to end.

We're proud to offer it to you and we know you're going to love it.

Scanner-Mate in '78

It's really where the Action is

HOW TO GET INTO THE ACTION

You may have been using your monitor or scanner up until now on a "hit or miss" basis—without the help of this directory. It might pass the time—for a little while—to sit around not knowing who you're hearing or what you could have heard, and not understanding what's being said, but you bought your equipment so you'd know what's going on—who's doing what to whom—and without this book it can get very frustrating.

ACTION FREQUENCIES represents a major breakthrough in techniques of researching and compiling the most recent Federal Communications Commission (FCC) data. All of the information in this book is taken directly and solely from FCC files. Within hours after the FCC grants a license, we have the data in our computer! You'll also find that this book is easier to use and understand, and contains more useful information than any other publication on the market. So what are we waiting for—let's get into the ACTION. . .

ACTION FREQUENCIES is divided into two Sections to assist you in finding exactly what you want to listen to. The first Section groups the Police, Fire, Special Emergency (Ambulance and Rescue Squad) and Local Government users according to State, and lists each licensee alphabetically, according to the name under which he is licensed by the FCC. The second Section groups the users numerically, according to frequency, and lists each licensee alphabetically and sequentially according to Call Sign.

First of all, lets look at Part I:

Kentucky Name	Transmitter City	SER	Freq. MHZ	Call Sign	No. of Stations BAS	MOB	Other
Washington County	Springfield	P	155.130	KIQ376	1	8

If you live in or around Washington County, Kentucky, and you are interested in listening to what the County Police are doing, you look under "Kentucky" until alphabetically you have come to Washington County. If you don't see what you want under "Washington County," go back and look under "County of Washington" (some groups still license themselves this way). Once you've found the name of the licensee you want to listen to, look at the "TRANSMITTER CITY," which will tell you the nearest city or town to which their base station is located. In this case, the nearest city or town is Springfield.

Now look at the "SER" or Radio Service. This will tell you whether you've got the Police Department, the Fire Department, Local Government (city manager, dog catcher, driver education, water department, etc.), or the rescue squad or ambulance. The codes used in this book for each of these Radio Services are as follows:

P—Police

L—Local Government (in many cases you may find police activities on Local Government frequencies).

F—Fire

S—Special Emergency (ambulance and rescue, including private individuals, such as morticians, who operate rescue vehicles).

In our example the code under "SER" is P, so you know you have located the Washington County, Kentucky Police.

The next item you will see is "FREQ. MHZ" which is the frequency in MegaHertz (they used to be called Megacycles) that your target is on. All monitors and scanners use MegaHertz. In this case, you can easily see that the Washington County Police are on 155.130 MHz, and you know exactly where to tune your monitor to hear them.

Next is the Call Sign. This is the special identification which the FCC assigns to each and every entity that obtains a license to operate two-way radio equipment. This call sign must be given during each radio transmission, and by listening carefully, you may hear the call signs of groups far enough away from you that you never thought you could actually receive their transmissions. Looking back at our example, you will see that Washington County Police have been assigned "KIQ376" as their call sign.

Now, the FCC assigns different call signs to different types of stations. If you look at the last item in the example ("NO. OF STATIONS, BAS MOB OTHER") you will see that KIQ376 is licensed for 1 "BAS" (base station) 8 "MOB's" (mobile units), and no "OTHER's." This means that they have a "simplex" system—both the base station and the mobile units communicate on the same frequency, and use only one call sign among them. You will find that a base station alone, or a base and mobile system on the same frequency will have a call sign with three letters and three numbers (such as KIQ376).

Often, you will pick up different types of call signs such as KQ2863 or KHW27. A call sign with two letters and four numbers such as the former means that the transmission is coming from a mobile unit; if you hear three letters and two numbers such as the latter, you are listening to a control station. We use the following codes to tell you what kind of station you are listening to:

BA—Base Station. Transmits directly to the mobile units. Is located in a fixed place.

BM—Base/Mobile. Such as Washington County.

CO—Control Station. At a fixed location. Must transmit through a Mobile Relay to communicate with mobile units. Used most often above 450 MHz.

FX—Fixed Station. Used for point-to-point communications, such as between one precinct station and another.

MO—Mobile unit. Police cars, ambulances, fire trucks.

MR—Mobile Relay. A station used to extend the range of communications, usually placed on the highest available site, such as a mountain or a tall building.

OR—Fixed Repeater. Used to extend the range of point-to-point communications.

RP—Repeater. Automatically repeats and relays messages. Used to extend range.

TB—Temporary Base. A base station which is licensed for an area and not a specific location. The base may be moved from place to place, and must be moved at least once a year. Many voluntary firemen have temporary base stations in their homes, and Police Departments often use temporary bases during stake-out and raids.

TC—Temporary Control. A control station which can and must be moved at least once a year.

See how easy it is? O.K. now that you're an expert, let's take a quick look at Part II:

155.130

Call Sign	Name	Transmitter LOC City	ST	SER
KIQ376	Washington County	Springfield	KY.	P

Let's assume you're listening to your monitor and you suddenly pick up the call sign KIQ376 on frequency 155.130 MHz. How do you find out who it is? Just turn to Section II of this book, look up KIQ376 under the listings for 155.130 MHz and you've got it. And that's all there is to it. "ST" means the State the transmitter is in and you know the rest. . . . ENJOY!

IF YOU CAN'T LOCATE INFORMATION, BE SURE TO CHECK THE "LATE ADDITIONS" ON PAGE 156.

TO GET THE MOST OUT OF YOUR SCANNER, BE SURE TO READ "THE BASICS OF TWO-WAY RADIO" ON PAGE 159 OF THIS BOOK.

The Basics of Two-Way Radio

Enjoying your scanner or monitor? Great! But to help you enjoy it even more and avoid some pitfalls that could be unnecessarily frustrating and expensive, we'd like to tell you some of the basics of what two-way radio is all about.

Until the middle 1960's frequencies were referred to in terms of "cycles": kilocycles, megacycles, etc. To simplify the meaning and to honor the physicist, Heinrich R. Hertz, whose discoveries led to the practical use of two-way radio, we now refer to frequencies in terms of Hertz: kiloHertz, MegaHertz, etc. Although cycles and Hertz don't mean exactly the same thing (one Hertz is equal to one cycle per second), the terms are often used interchangeably. The Public Safety frequencies you monitor are measured in MegaHertz (MHz), primarily in one of three radio bands: Low Band (below 50 MHz), VHF (150 to 170 MHz), and UHF (450-512 MHz).

The lower frequencies command a greater range than the higher frequencies. Low Band is, however, subject to a strange phenomenon called "Skip." Increased solar activity or sunspot flares, which build up in roughly seven-year cycles, can cause a Low Band transmission to take an extra long bounce off the ionosphere and land even thousands of miles away from its origin. If you are monitoring a Low Band transmission and a call suddenly breaks in which names streets and areas that you know are not around your location, you are witnessing "skip." With the current sunspot cycle hitting its peak around 1979, your Low Band monitors should pick up transmissions from all over the country for the next few years.

Low Band systems need only one frequency for both the base stations and the mobile units. Your monitor needs only one crystal to hear both sides of the conversation for each of the systems you wish to monitor. Often, a single agency or department will show that they are licensed for more than one Low Band frequency, or for a mixture of bands. Normally, this means that each frequency is used for a separate purpose: one may be Command and Control, another may be Dispatch, another may be Narcotics, and so on. If you want to hear what's going on in the whole department, you must crystal up (or program, if your scanner is synthesized) for each Low Band frequency listed.

VHF systems are used in the same manner as Low Band systems. While VHF does not get the extended range that Low Band has, it is not affected by "skip," so the transmissions are more stable. With VHF too, all that is needed (and usually used) is a single frequency between the base stations and the mobile units, and all you need is a single crystal per frequency to hear the whole conversation.

With UHF radio frequencies, however, the systems get a little more complex. Although base-to-mobile communication on a single UHF frequency is certainly possible, UHF transmissions get less range than Low Band or VHF systems so mobile relay or repeater type operations are generally used to extend the range. UHF frequencies may be licensed by the FCC in pairs that are exactly 5 MHz apart. The best way to explain a "mobile relay or repeater system" is by example:

Let's assume a single system consists of both 451.025 MHz and 456.025 MHz. The licensee, say a police department, chooses a site high on a mountain top, at the top of a tall building, or another location which is high and relatively interference-free. This is where he installs his mobile relay station. The mobile relay is equipped to transmit automatically, and always on the low half of the frequency pair. In this case, 451.025 MHz is the transmitting frequency for the mobile relay. The relay is also equipped to receive on the high half of the pair (456.025 MHz).

The licensee then installs one or more control stations at convenient locations. A police department might locate control stations at headquarters and at various precinct stations throughout a city where dispatchers can quickly relay emergency calls. The control stations always transmit on the high end of the frequency pair (456.025 MHz). In this type of system the mobile units, also, transmit on the high frequency and both control stations and mobiles receive on the low end.

The way the whole thing functions is really quite simple. If a dispatcher wants to direct a certain car to a specific location, he keys up a control station and calls that car. The transmission is sent through a directional antenna which is aimed straight at the mobile relay, which in turn automatically amplifies the call (thereby extending the range) and retransmits it through an omnidirectional antenna so the appropriate mobile (or any mobiles in the area) can respond. The mobile can then talk back to the control center in the same manner, and the whole connection procedure takes less than a second.

If you want to monitor a UHF mobile relay system, surprisingly enough, you only need one crystal. To hear both sides of the conversation, all you need do is crystal or program for the mobile relay transmit frequency, which is, in every case, the low half of the pair. In the above example, by using 451.025 MHz alone, you will hear the whole conversation.

While the Low Band, VHF, and UHF systems described above make up the vast majority of the communications you will encounter, there are variations. Occasionally you may come across a VHF or even a Low Band repeater system, or a vehicular repeater system, which enables a licensee to communicate back to his home base by using a low power portable (hand-held) unit which transmits through a repeater in his car. This type of communication is used for "at-scene" operations such as stakeouts or accidents where the licensee must maintain communications while away from his vehicle. The codes next to each frequency listing in this book* will tell you when mobile relay operations are being used, and in all cases you can monitor the whole conversation with the crystal for the mobile relay transmit frequency alone. Enjoy!

. . . THE ACTION LANGUAGE . . .

When, at the turn of the century, Guglielmo Marconi first showed the world that "wireless" radio communications was not just a science fiction dream, but a reality, neither he or his contemporaries could have anticipated how much his invention would affect the future. Starting with the military and then spreading quickly to state and local police, taxicabs, ambulances, aircraft, utilities, fire departments, boaters, businesses, amateurs, and finally to you and me, the use of two-way radio has become part of our daily lives.

CB (Citizens' Band) Radio is becoming so popular that thousands of license applications are sent to the FCC each year. Police departments, seeing the number of people using CB are finding that they are able to get to the scenes of accidents or robberies, or even help a guy with a flat tire much faster by listening in and communicating on the CB frequencies, and then transmitting the call thru their regular emergency channels.

Because of this growing interest in CB Radio, the police and other emergency licensees are starting to pick up the CB lingo, and to use it as a convenience, along with their own "Ten Code," developed by the Associated Public Safety Communications Officers (APCO), both in the CB band (roughly 27 MHz) and in their own emergency bands. To aid you in understanding exactly what you're hearing on your monitor or scanner we've put together a brief list of the CB lingo, along with the police "Ten-Code."

KEEP THIS PAGE BY YOUR MONITOR AT ALL TIMES AND YOU'LL BE PICKING UP THE LINGO IN NO TIME AT ALL. Also, keep a pencil nearby so you can jot down new and different bits of lingo as you hear them.
